

ABSTRACT

A process of creating a large printed image by the formation of smaller printed digitally images which are subsequently assembled to create the large image. The process accounts for spaces between the smaller images, such as smaller images which are printed on individual ceramic tiles which are assembled with grout spaces between them.